DEEPEN YOUR SKILLS AND CONNECT WITH LEADERS

RIGHT PLACE, RIGHT TIME
Beyond our campus, Oregon and the Pacific Northwest continue to be the nexus of sustainable business management practices, public policy initiatives, new startups, and innovations. Oregon is an international leader in environmental quality, sustainability, and corporate social responsibility across both emerging industries, such as renewable energy and green materials, as well as cornerstone industries, such as electronics, food production and distribution, wood products, apparel, consumer products, and green building. Connect with these leaders in your classes, internships, and full-time employment.

PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS
Continuing our pioneering tradition, build on core law and business classes addressing the topics and tools shaping sustainability, including business strategy, life cycle analysis, industrial ecology, supply chain, climate change law and policy, sustainable tax, global environmental challenges, venture capital, public trust, water resources, or environmental economics … just to name a few. Beyond the classroom, get hands on experience through company consulting projects, legal clinics, speakers, seminars, and events—including one of the oldest annual conferences on sustainable business jointly planned and run by our JD and M.B.A. students.

SUSTAINABLE BUSINESS PRACTICE
The Sustainable Business Practices curriculum in the University of Oregon M.B.A. challenges students to address the intersection of business competitiveness and environmental, social, and financial stewardship.

GREEN BUSINESS LAW
Our newest program immerses students in the technology, policy, culture, and history of sustainable business sectors, such as renewable energy, green construction, and agricultural law.

ENVIRONMENTAL AND NATURAL RESOURCES LAW
We pioneered the earliest academic curriculum in public interest environmental law, created the first public interest environmental law clinic in the nation, and through our students, host the world’s oldest and largest public interest environmental law conference.
